Awfully Agonizing.

From the Houston Post.
"He told me my operation would be absolutely painless."
"And wasn't it?"
"Now, it cost me a hundred dollars!"

One Reason.

From the Baltimore Star.
The decline in the importations of diamonds is perhaps due to a growing realization that shirt-front headlights are not in the best of taste.

SOCIETY

THE coming visit of Admiral Togo will give an official phase to his stay in this city, which the President, the Secretary of State and the Japanese ambassador will take part. The White House dinner will be followed by a reception, and if the President's good luck in the matter of weather continues he can delightfully entertain his guests on the lawn and porches—in case it may be too warm for an indoor party.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Watson of 16th street, accompanied by their two sons, will leave shortly for California, where they will spend the month of August.

Mr. Moreno, wife of Lieut. Arisides Moreno, U. S. A., who, with her little son and daughter, has been spending a few days in Georgetown as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Williams, at their home on 1st street, left recently for Porto Rico, where she will visit her father, Capt. Fields.

Mrs. Caperton and Miss Marguerite Caperton, wife and daughter of Capt. William B. Caperton, N. S. N., are spending the summer at Jamestown, R. I.

Mrs. Marguerite Dupont Lee of Georgetown is spending the summer season in East Gloucester, Mass.

Mrs. Isaac Birch of Dumbarton avenue, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. J. Bon-nerville of Old Point, Va., are spending a few weeks on the Jersey coast.

Miss Reta Dunlop is spending the summer season in Europe.

Miss Sally Mackall is now occupying her new home on the corner of 25th and Q streets.

Miss Cora Stover of Georgetown has returned from Leesburg, Va., where she was the guest of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Lutz, at their country home, Springwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Person have given up their home in Georgetown, and with their son and daughter, Mr. Horace Person and Miss Ethel Person, will make their home in the future in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mrs. Fitzgerald of N street is spending a part of the summer in Montgomery county, Md.

Miss Laura Howison of Georgetown and her niece, Miss Juliette Parris, left last week for Rehoboth Beach, Del., where they will spend several weeks, stopping at the Henlopen House.

Miss Annie Lawler is spending a fortnight in New York, where she is the guest of relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Talcott of Georgetown and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Talcott, left last Tuesday for Machias, Me., where they will spend the month of August.

Miss Bertha Looker and her brother, Mr. Edward Looker of Georgetown, left recently for the Adirondacks, where they will spend some time. Mr. Looker will return home about the middle of August, but Miss Looker will remain north until the early fall.

Miss O'Donohue, accompanied by her niece, Miss Stohman, is taking an interesting trip through Canada and northern New York.

Miss Bertha Hebb has returned after a three-week visit in Asbury Park.

A quiet wedding of the week in San Francisco, but one that was of interest to a large circle of friends in this city, was that of Dr. Henry C. Coburn, U. S. A., and Miss Elma M. Sibley. The ceremony took place Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church, and only a few friends attended the service and wedding supper at the St. Francis.
The bride was veiled in a traveling gown of blue cloth, with a picture hat to match the effective costume. Dr. and Mrs. Coburn will sail on the Sheridan for their new home in Manila.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. William Swinburne, who are abroad, were, at last advices, staying in St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Col. and Mrs. McCormick, who are enroute to Manila, have been much entertained by the service set during their stay in San Francisco. Friday afternoon Mrs.
Waterman, wife of Col. Waterman, U. S. A., gave a bridge party for Mrs. McCormick.

When King George and Queen Mary held court at Dublin Castle during their recent visit to the Irish capital the latter wore a very handsome dress made for her in Dublin, and composed entirely of Irish woven materials. Her majesty has always shown a predilection for the people of the Emerald Isle, and St. Patrick's blue is her favorite tint. Masses of Irish lace covered the robe, and the emeralds which glittered among the diamonds completed the complement.

The king wore his mantle of St. Patrick over his uniform, and the light blue of the order was conspicuous in the attire of the viceregal pages. The newly created knights, Lord Kitchener and Lord Shaftesbury, were in attendance upon his majesty. Lady Aberdeen, who was seated beside the king, looked remarkably well in a rich robe of silver and silver brocade, the corsage formed of silver and mauve embroidered wheat ears applied to fine tulle.

The beautiful interlacy formed in Celtic ornament was worked into a wide border, wrought in silver on the mauve velvet train, and the rich material was closely studded with amethysts. Her excellency's jewels were a diamond crown, a pearl necklace and diamond clusters.

The queen wore a dress of green and gold satin, draped with a scarf of black tulle and covered with superb Carrickmacross lace, which had been made to her grandmother, whose husband, Lord Eglinton, was viceroy of Ireland in 1852. Lady Londonderry's train was cloth of gold, covered with similar lace of very fine quality. She wore a beautiful diamond stomacher and a necklace of diamonds and pearls.

The wearings of the green in various shades was a feature of the court, and the national color was conspicuously becoming to the beautiful Irishwomen who passed in procession before the throne of George III. The splendid diamond jewels played off Irish melodies.

Lady Limerick, wearing a dress of green and gold, presented her handsome daughter, Lady Veta Perry, who was dressed in white, adorned with Limerick lace.

The queen cordially greeted the Dowager Lady Dufferin, a great Irishwoman and hostess, and widow of an Indian viceroi. Lady Dufferin wore a black embroided velvet tulle, but the cream lace tucker which outlined the décolletage was made from old Limerick ruffles worn by George III. The splendid diamond orders which flashed on her black robe were the grand cross of the Order of the Cheif and of the Lion and the Sun.

Queen Mary wore at her state entry into Dublin a dress specially woven for her in a pale shade of green, trimmed with Irish rose point lace. The white hat was trimmed with white ostrich feathers, and emeralds were the jewels selected as most suitable for the visit to the Emerald Isle. Princess Mary wore a pretty St. Patrick blue with brook and a straw hat trimmed with gray tulle and little white blossoms.

For the service at St. Patrick's Cathedral the queen wore a lovely white silk moulin dress, with painted design of pale pink roses and blue ribbons. The bodice was trimmed with Irish lace and pale blue satin. Her white hat was encircled with soft pink ostrich feathers.

Before the queen left Dublin she received a delegation of Belfast women, headed by Lady Londonderry, who presented her with a corsage, sleeves and a panel of Yougal lace, all that is completed so far of the entire dress which is being made for her. The lace is of exquisite workmanship, and as Yougal point requires the finest and most laborious work which any Irish lace involves, it will be many months before the whole dress is finished.

At the Phoenix Park races, which were a part of the entertainment also for the king and queen, all the latest fashions were further exemplified in smart gowns and hats, with Irish laces and materials much to the fore. The Countess of Antrim wore magnificent Irish lace, the Carrickmacross lace forming a long coat and the Limerick lace a deep flounce on the black dress. Her black hat was relaxed with blue plumes. Lady Powers-court wore a pinaflore dress of St. Patrick blue satin under nixon embroidered in green and trimmed with lace, and a black hat with white ostrich feathers.
